BEA Union Investment Management Limited

The global economy underwent substantial changes, and the rise of FinTech has brought in new financial institutions providing financial services to a large number of customers and investors, as well as changing the ways banks and corporations interact with their clients and each other.

Technology is shaping the asset management industry, and has the potential to transform processes, operations and systems, creating something different for future generations to enjoy. As asset management enters the 21st century, technology will become mission critical to drive customer engagement, data mining for information on clients and potential clients, operational efficiency and regulatory and tax reporting.

In this session, our distinguished speakers will share their views and many years of experience in asset management, to discuss the industry's current landscape and what drives transformations; and how young graduates should prepare themselves for a career in the financial services sector to cope with the new economy.
